POETRY

Easy

On a Wednesday afternoon rubbing my face in the practical joke of every hand-me-down truth how I missed what I lost in the mass of losing it as a tourist in the backyard of my own life while smiling of porcelain, and now

I'm at a motel parking lot in Idaho, rapping lurid, ancient need, these damn flip-flops, standing under the Go-Pass canopy with a sackful of hay of need, a crummy pull of someone in my pocket, but Oh how I love this moment — perched before the narrowing umbilicus, the heart playing in their starboard lanes mollusks, BUT BEHOLD BEYOND this tip, the topography of heaven:

Forget the contraband heart or the retrievable pronouncements of loss, love, all those banal accidents, every dirty particle needs to be removable in its carved gals of light, my blood in time, a dog like I flip your my spine I've left the parking lot to just across the median line

Kill the headlights, put it in neutral this landscape is dubbed to a supine hush and I am at ease, I am at ease
